In her presentation, Dr. Sprenger will focus upon the primary goal of “Response to Intervention”, which is ensuring optimal instruction for all students within the classroom setting. She will provide suggestions for creating a classroom environment that addresses students’ diverse learning needs and offer techniques for students to improve their retrieval of information. Her practical instructional strategies will bring new insights to differentiated instruction that will improve all students’ learning outcomes.

Dr. Sprenger is an adjunct professor at Aurora University specializing in brain-based learning, memory and differentiation. The author of several books, Dr. Sprenger is also a consultant and an international speaker with an engaging and interactive style.
